City council chooses not to jump on board zoning measure

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The West Sacramento City Council on July 10 listened to a staff report on the WS-QUAD ballot initiative, heard testimony from those for and against it, and then did what they were expected to do: the council "took a pass" on making the zoning measure law, and bound it over for the November 5 local ballot.

"I still think it's not entirely clearly what the effects of the zoning initiative will be," reported Redevelopment Agency Director Val Toppenberg, one of the staff members who created the report. "The council will have some choices as we go along."

The initiative calls for West Sacramento to downplay future industrial growth, replacing it with residential, commercial and related uses. It specifically calls to rezone – with some exceptions – land owned by the Port of Sacramento or in Southport.

But for the sake of the report, staff assumed that the city would implement the proposed initiative largely by converting all future industrial development to mostly-residential development.

"Existing zoning would hold to about 600 units of housing" on those properties, said Les Bowman of the redevelopment agency. "Under the initiative, it would yield an additional 2,600 units, or 7,000 residents."

That would result in the reduction of jobs, but an increase in property values. The city's general fund will be in trouble either way unless West Sacramento shrinks its redevelopment area, staff added.

Traffic could be scary under the admitted "worst case" scenario addressed by the staff report. Southport-area arterials could be in big trouble if residential development is expanded under the initiative.

"We came to the conclusion that the most likely land use to fill the gap (left by industrial development) would be residential," said Steve Patek, director of planning for the city.

On the other hand, the initiative and the housing it could add might help improve the area's attraction to retailers, staff added.

Initiative proponent Kimber Goddard responded to the report by telling the council that "the initiative speaks of balance."

"The assumptions drive the conclusions," said Goddard. "The assumptions here are very unlikely to occur. It's not like you adopt this initiative and it turns into a residential bombshell," he said. "It gives you a chance to adjust the mix. Even under this worst-case scenario, this initiative is still a fiscal winner."

John Sulpizio, director of the Port of Sacramento, said that the city should not base its zoning "on the fears and self-interests of a select group," and that he and the port commission chairman will probably recommend opposition to the anti-industrial measure.

"This is a broadside attack on the port," he said.

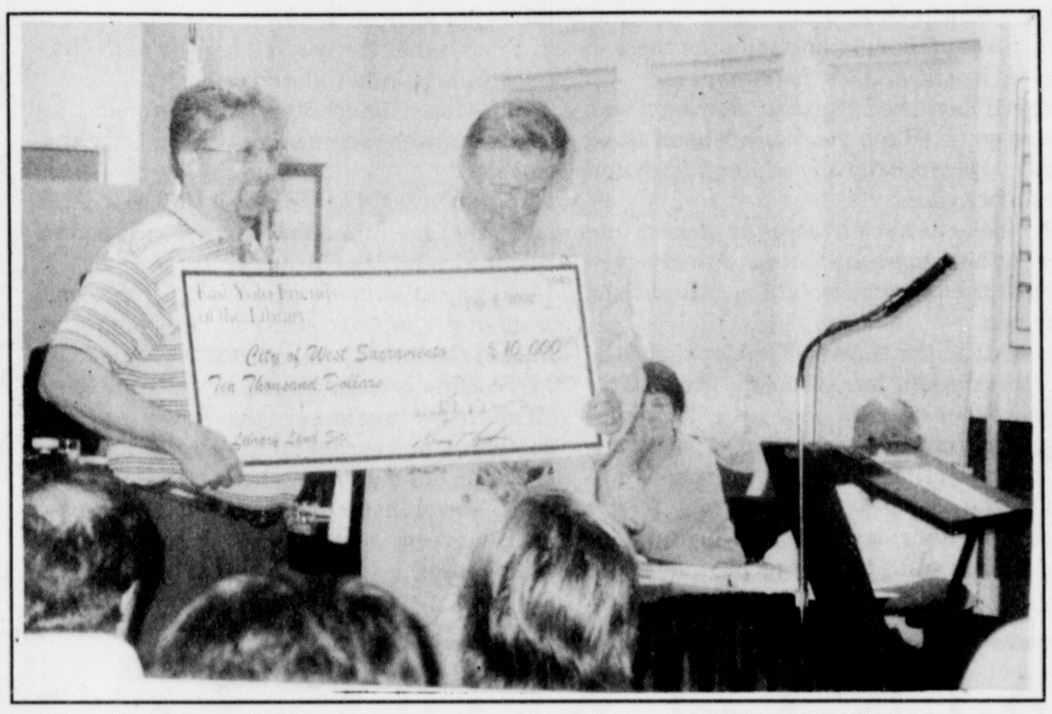
Seed money

Wes Beers, President of East Yolo Friends of the Library, presented a check for $10,000 to the City of West Sacramento, Wednesday night to assist with purchase of land for a new library.

Beers, a former West Sacramento Mayor and Councilmember, handed the check to Mayor William Kristoff saying "I have good news. The East Yolo Friends of the Library are pitching in $10,000 as the initial investment in a site for a new library in West Sacramento. We are confident that with the city's help, this investment, will pay dividends for West Sacramento residents far into the future."

Kristoff, smiled as he accepted the check saying, "On behalf of the city I accept this check. I want to thank the East Yolo Friends of the Library for such an extraordinary commitment." Kristoff said purchase of a site for a proposed new library will be scheduled for an upcoming council agenda.

The proposed new library for West Sacramento would consist of 25, 000 square feet, an increase of 16,581 square feet over the current site. Estimates place the cost for the new library at $9.6 million. A mix of funding would finance the facility with the lion's share of 65% coming from a state grant. The remaining 35% would come from a mix of county funds, including development impact fees. The revenues generated by a local sales tax measure currently scheduled for the November ballot would assist with operating expenses of a new library.



WES BEERS of the East Yolo Friends of the Library hands over a $10,000 donation to be used in a fund for a library site in West Sacramento. Accepting the check is Mayor Bill Kristoff

Yolo County Supervisor Mike McGowan, a long-time support of a new library, congratulated Beers by saying "The East Yolo Friends have stepped up to the plate and hit a home run!"

The project's timeline calls for site and architect selection by September, passage of the sales tax increase in November, application for State Library Bond Act matching funds in March, 2003, and a construction start date in May of 2004. Construction would be completed in November 2005.

The current Arthur F. Turner branch opened in May, 1976. This 8,419 square foot library was built to "comfortably house" 30,000 books. Twenty-six years later, the collection has nearly 70,000 items, more than twice what the space was originally intended to hold.

Only 13 computer workstations are currently available in the public space, some located in cramped clusters to take advantage of existing wiring. There is little space for additional workstations although public interest and demand for computer and Internet access is high and increasing.

There is no place in which to conduct computer training.

Candidates line up, campaign season opens–

Five people have so far "pulled papers" in preparation for a run for city council in West Sacramento in November.

City clerk Helen Kanowsky reports that challenger Jeff Henry, a resident of Angel Court in Southport, was first in the door at her office when the filing period opened Monday. He was joined later in the day by incumbent city council member Christopher Cabaldon of Meadow Road in the Park Blvd. neighborhood; challenger Theodora Boylan of Westacre Rd. north of West Capitol Ave.; challenger Kimber Goddard of Kelly's Island Rd. in Southport; and challenger Mark Johannessen of Headslane Rd. in Southport.

"This is the first time I've ever had five people, one right after another, come in on the first day of filing," commented Kanowsky.

But one of those five is not expecting to follow through on the process. Boylan – a News-Ledger contributor – told the newspaper yesterday that she has decided not to run soon after picking up the candidacy papers.

The two city council spots on the ballot are for at-large, four-year terms.

As of press time yesterday, no candidate had yet completed papers and turned them back in to make their candidacy official.

The other incumbent, Jim Cahill of the Park Blvd. neighborhood, has not yet "pulled papers" and has recently said he was yet undecided whether to seek another term.

The filing period runs through August 9 (or August 14 if an incumbent does not file by August 9). Those interested in running for city council (two seats will be on the ballot) can obtain a nomination packet from the city clerk, 1350 Halyard Drive, West Sacramento, daily between 8:00 –5:00 PM. To be eligible to run, individuals must be registered to vote in West Sacramento and at least 18 years of age. Potential candidates must appear in person to request the nomination packet (which takes approximately 30 minutes to review), and file the papers, in person, by August 9, 2002. There is no filing fee to run for city council, however there is a fee to have a candidate's statement printed in the voter information section of the sample ballot.

For information, call Helen Kanowsky, City Clerk, 373-5800.

Meanwhile, the filing period for two seats on the local school board is open through Aug. 9, and will be extended to Aug. 14 if one of the incumbents does not file to run again.

As of press time yesterday, candidacy papers had been picked up only by challenger David Trussell of Spruce Way in the Southport area.

The at-large, four-year term seats up for grabs are held by David P. Farmer and Ardeene Westvik.

Filing forms are available from the Yolo County Elections Department, 625 Court St., Room B-1 in Woodland. Call (530) 666-8133 for more information.

Church may buy site city gave up on

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A "problem" property bought in 1987 to be a future West Sacramento City Hall may soon be sold to a church.

The site at the northwest corner of Sacramento and Kegle avenues was purchased in 1987 by the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency for $850,000 from the G.W. Williams Co. City officials are now negotiating to sell 5.6 acres of the property – withholding one acre for a future fire station – to the Russian Church of Evangelical Christian Baptists for its currently assessed value of $370,000.

Les Bowman of the redevelopment agency commented on the apparent financial loss.

"In the late '80s, we were in the midst of a real estate bubble," he said. "This is not the only West Sacramento property that has not come back to its former value."

Bowman said that the property never fulfilled its intended purpose as a city hall or, later, as a proposed police station site. One problem was the low ground level – a problem lessened over the years by a practice of bringing in fill dirt from city projects to dump at the site.

Bowman said the property is already "off the tax rolls" because it is zoned "public/quasi-public," and will stay that way if sold to the church.

"We haven't gotten a lot of viable proposals for that property over the years," he said. "It's kind of a 'problem property.' "

The church plans to build a 44,000 square foot facility with operations seven days per week and peak attendance of about 1,100 people attending morning and evening services on Sundays.

"The church will add new activity to the area, and will be a new building, so it's not without benefit to the area," said Bowman.

The city council will consider the church's planned design tonight, and both sides will continue negotiations towards the possible "deal points" for the land sale.

YONET: 3 arrested

Agents from the Yolo County Narcotics Enforcement Team (YONET) arrested two people in a drug bust Friday at a Halyard Drive motel.

"YONET was advised that (Leonard) Shaw sells methamphetamine and was going to pick up some methamphetamine that night," reported the inter-department law enforcement team. After receiving the report about the 47-year old suspect on Thursday, YONET learned that Shaw was on parole for narcotics violations, and that the parole department had placed a "hold" on him for arrest.

At about 9:45 a.m. Friday, YONET agents went to the Best Western Motel where they believed he was staying. They knocked on the motel room door after hearing voices inside.

The knock was answered by Renee Harrison, 31, said a YONET press release. She told the officers that Shaw wasn't there, but officers asked if they could come inside to check and then found Shaw in the room's bathroom. They also contacted a third person, 30-year old Sherry Jones.

In the room were found about 1.4 grams of methamphetamine in three baggies, 19 hypodermic syringes, including one with about 0.1 cc of methamphetamine, a digital scale, cell phone, pager, packaging material, and $460 in Shaw's wallet. Another $75 was located on Harrison.

Also seized from Harrison was a container with five baggies containing a total of 10.5 grams of methamphetamine.

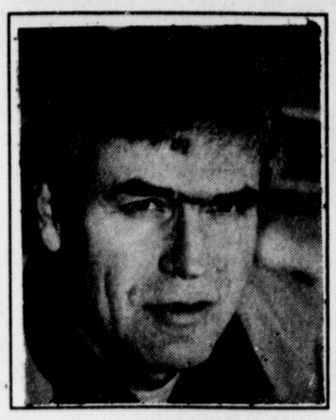
Men, women, and their different shower routines

Editor's note: Daryl is taking the rest of the month off from column writing. Below is one of his favorites from the past.



My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

Quite awhile ago, I wrote a rather lengthy column on what I consider to be the fascinating subject of shower routines, and when I was finished, I was pretty sure I had covered just about everything one would ever care to know about how slavish each of us can be to our own personal showering habits and techniques. In that column, I discussed in great detail the rather complicated scrubbing and toweling-off procedures each of us seem to have and I even called a trusted friend to see if he could shed any light on the topic, only to be told, "Sorry, Daryl, but anything that goes on while I'm in the bathtub is strictly between me and my rubber duckie."

Anyway, just when I thought there was absolutely nothing new to be learned about how men and women go about getting clean, the following information was recently presented to the scientific showering community, and it goes a little something like this:

How a woman showers:

1. She takes off her clothes and puts them in separate "lights" and "darks" hampers.

2. She strolls to the bathroom wearing a long dressing gown. If she sees her husband along the way, she covers up any exposed flesh and steps up her pace.

3. She looks at her physique in mirror and sticks out her stomach so she can worry even more about how much weight see thinks she has gained.

4. She gets in the shower. She looks for the facecloth, armcloth, legcloth, and pumice stone.

5. She washes her hair once with Cucumber and Lamfrey conditioner shampoo, which has 83 added vitamins, then repeats whole process again.

6. She conditions her hair with any number of enriching and enhancing products and leaves it on her hair for 15 minutes while the hot water continues to run and the PG&E bill goes through the roof.

7. She gets extremely angry when she realizes her husband/and or children have been using her apricot facial scrub.

8. She washes the rest of her body with Ginger Nut and Jaffa Cake body wash.

9. She rinses the conditioner off her hair (this takes another 15 minutes to do correctly and completely).

10. She shaves her underarms and legs. And notes that her bikini line waxing will need to be done in the near future.

11. She screams loudly when her husband can't wait any longer to use the bathroom and flushes the toilet.

12. She finally turns off the shower, squeegees off all the wet surfaces in the showering compartment, and sprays mold spots with Tilex.

13. She gets out of the shower and dries off with a towel the size of a small Pacific island.

14. She wraps her hair in a super absorbent second towel.

15. She carefully checks her entire body for the remotest sign of a zit and immediately attacks it when found. She also checks for any new stretch marks or varicose veins.

16. She returns to her bedroom wearing a long dressing gown and a "Queen of the Nile" towel on head.

17. If she sees her husband along the way, she covers up any exposed flesh and rushes to the bedroom to begin an hour-long process of getting dressed for the day.

How a man showers:

1. He takes off his clothes while sitting on the edge of the bed and leaves them in a pile on the floor.

2. He walks naked to the bathroom. If he sees his wife along the way, he moons her.

3. He looks at his manly physique in the mirror, does a muscleman pose and completely fails to notice that his gut is twice the size it used to be.

4. He gets in the shower (if he's lucky there will be a bar of unscented soap) and uses his hands instead of a washcloth.

5. He quickly scrubs everything in sight, leaving his hair on the soap bar.

6. He tries to remember if this is the month he puts a little conditioner on his hair.

7. He quickly rinses off and gets out of the shower, failing to notice all the water on the floor because he let the curtain hang out of the tub the whole time.

8. He partially dries off.

9. He admires himself in the mirror one last time.

10. He leaves the wet bath mat on the bathroom floor and doesn't even give a second thought to wiping down the shower walls to help prevent mold.

11. He leaves the bathroom light and fan on.

12. He returns to the bedroom with a towel around his waist. If he sees wife along the way, he flashes her.

13. He throws his wet towel on bed and yells, "So, what's for breakfast?"

partment arrived to strip-search Harrison, who told the officer she had a needle in her bra. Harrison then turned the syringe over to the officers.

Shaw was arrested for various drug and parole violation charges. Harrison and Jones were also arrested on drug charges.

While en route to jail, said YONET, Harrison admitted possession of two baggies of methamphetamine in her waistband. She said she received one bag from Shaw for helping to rent the room, and had bought the other from Shaw for a friend. At the jail, she turned the baggies over to officials, said the YONET statement, and 2.3 grams of suspected methamphetamine was found.

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

I'm back from my two-week vacation but Major League baseball people are talking about taking a long vacation of their own around August 11th.

After a disappointing All-Star game, the powers to be are again talking about a work stoppage. Commissioner Bud Selig is fighting back the negative press after calling off the 2002 All-Star with the scored tied after 11 innings. Both teams claim to have used all their pitchers. If there is an all-star game next year the commissioner will be expanding the all-star rosters and adding few more pitchers. Well, it's a little to late for us this season but anyway this Bud is for you!

The San Francisco Giants (53-39) are on a roll after the all-star break winning 6 of 7 ballgames and creeping up to 1 ½ games on Los Angeles and Arizona in the race for the Western Division. Keep in mind if there is a strike during the season the teams with the best records will make the playoffs. If there is a post season!

The Giants will play the first place Cardinals (50-39) and Dodgers (55-38) six times each during the next two weeks! First place is were you want to be during a strike shorten season.

The Oakland A's (54-39) are also playing great baseball and have added another starting pitcher to their starting rotation. Ted Lilly came over to Oakland in a seven-player trade from the Yankees. Lilly's first start wearing an A's jersey was very impressive. He pitched no-hit ball for 5 innings in his 4-0 shutout against Tampa Bay. Don't look now but the A's, who are 4 games back of Seattle, are making their move in the Western Division.

NFL

The National Football League is right around the corner with the San Francisco 49ers opening up their training camps on July 20th in Stockton. The 49ers acquired quarterback Cade McNown from the Miami Dolphins in exchange for a conditional seventh-round draft pick. If McNown is on the 49ers' roster five or more ga..es in 2002, the 49ers will lose their seventh-round pick in 2003. This roster move forced the 49ers to cut to Sacramento area quarterbacks in Aaron Garcia and Gino Carmazzi.

The 49ers accomplished their initial goal of signing free agents. The Niners signed most of their own free agents in center Jeremy Newberry, running back Garrison Hearst, fullback Fred Beasley and backup tackle Matt Willig.

The only player who got away was strong safety Lance Schulters, who wanted a truck full of money the 49ers were able to sign veteran safety Tony Parrish away from the Bears for $12 million over 5 years.

The Oakland Raiders will open up their training camp on July 25th in Napa but bad news already hit their mini-camp. Starting defensive end Regan Upshaw will miss the 2002 season because of a torn anterior cruciate knee ligament. Upshaw, beginning his third year with Oakland, suffered the injury Thursday at the start of a three-day camp.

The good news is Raiders extended the contract of All-pro quarterback Rich Gannon's contract by 6 years and $54 million. The deal, which calls for guaranteed money of up to $8.5 million over the next two seasons, puts the 36-year-old Gannon among the upper paid QB's in the league. The Raiders will go to camp with only two other quarterbacks in Marques Tuiasosopo and ex-49er Rick Mirer.

Boxing

Boxing returns to Northern California with a 12 round Championship fight on July 19th at Feather Falls Casino. West Sacramento's Juan Lazcano (29-2-1, 22 KO's) will defend his IBA lightweight title against Benito Rodriquez (33-18, 21 KO's). The card will start at 5:30 p.m. and feature local fighters Danny Savala, Erik Regan and Eliza Olson. Tickets will be available at the door and are priced at $30, $40 and $50.

Promoter Don Chargin is negotiating with ESPN for a September title defense by World Boxing Council super-bantamweight champion Willie Jorrin at Arco Arena. The WBC mandated rematch between West Sacramento's Jorrin (28-0-1,12 knockouts) and leading contender Oscar Larios (44-3-1, 31 KOs) of Mexico is set to go on Friday, September 27th.

See ya next week!

Soccer signups

West Sacramento Club Soccer will be holding their last soccer signups on Saturday, July 20 from 10a.m. to noon at Bryte Park. Please bring a copy of the child's birth certificate, small photo and $65.00. The league is recruiting boys and girls of all ages starting from age 4 to 19 years of age. For more information please call Richard Novoa 372-7332 or Dale Davis at 375-0503.

West Sac's John Ohlson is 'Yolo Champion'

Yolo County Supervisor Mike McGowan (right) presents John Ohlson with a 'Yolo Champion' award honoring Ohlson's long-standing community service efforts.

John Ohlson, one of West Sacramento's most visible long-time community activists was honored with a Yolo Champion award last week by Yolo County Supervisor Mike McGowan.

Ohlson, who has lived in West Sacramento for over 70 years, has been active on a number of fronts including serving as an active member of the campaign to improve local drinking water, and in pressing for construction of the Arthur Turner library, and more recently advocating for construction of a new library.

Yolo Champion awards are presented as a way of recognizing outstanding service and achievement among Yolo County residents.

Nominated for his contributions to public service, a visibly-surprised Ohlson accepted the award from McGowan by saying he was grateful for the recognition, and "was only doing what needed to be done."

McGowan said Ohlson had delivered "years of selfless service" to the West Sacramento community.

"John Ohlson and his wife Grace Ohlson, who passed away, have been mainstays of the West Sacramento community. Their actions have spoken louder than words. When the community needed them they were there," McGowan said.

In addition to noting Ohlson skills as a gardener, McGowan also mentioned Ohlson's devotion to the local Democratic Party saying "I can't tell you the number of times I've watched John walking the sidewalks, clipboard in hand, to ensure that people turned out to vote."

Ohlson added that he viewed "participation in our democracy as simply our responsibility as citizens."

The Board of Supervisors also presented four other Yolo Champion awards this week to a series of individuals known for their public service.

The board also gave awards to: Jack Graf of Winters, Marlin "Skip" Davies of Woodland, Mary Ellen Baldwin of Davis, and Ted Puntillo, of Davis.

Graf, a Winters resident and former County Superintendent of Schools was presented with a Yolo Champion award by Supervisor Lynnel Pollock who said Graf "exemplified the category of public achievement." Graf who also served as Superintendent of

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Right answer, wrong question

West Sacramento's city staff last week gave the city council a report on the expected impacts of the WS-QUAD ballot measure, which would encourage re-zoning of industrial land at the port and in Southport.

City staff appeared to have done an admirable job estimating the impacts of the initiative. Despite their bosses' antagonism towards the ballot measure, they did not appear to be deliberately torpedoing it through a biased "unbiased" study.

Their report's conclusions were mixed. The report found a few bright spots among the initiative's impacts, such as increasing the city's future ability to attract mid-size retail centers (the kind that might be home to a Target or Mervyn's), while pointing out some scary possibilities regarding traffic congestion and other threats.

Staff emphasized that their report's validity depended on its assumptions. The study admittedly concentrated on a "worst case" scenario that made virtually all of the land in question "residential" and drove the future Southport population sky-high.

While the information that resulted from this assumption is useful, city officials also need to keep in mind that the initiative would be implemented by future city councils, who would be unlikely to choose this "worst case" plan. These future officials would have the ability to choose just how to re-plan the industrial land. The initiative gives them some latitude in the matter – just how much latitude is a good question for staff to try to answer in the report.

The current West Sacramento city council isn't about to change its mind and adopt the proposed initiative as law. The initiative will surely go forward to the November 5 ballot.

In the meantime, the city would be well-served by an addition to the study; one that asks the question of how the initiative might intelligently be implemented by future city leaders, and what the effects of those choices might be. This way, the study would be expanded to address the question of not only how the initiative might be implemented by a totally incompetent city council, but how a smarter one might do it.

That's the kind of information West Sacramento really needs to fairly judge this ballot measure.

Guest commentary:

Controlled like a 'business'

By John Sulpizio, Director
Port of Sacramento

Editor's note: This is the second in an occasional series of commentaries from the port director.

The Port is an independent unit of local government; however, it does not operate outside the parameters of extensive regulation provided by other governments including the City of West Sacramento. The Port is like any private business that must observe an array of local, State and Federal laws.

Although the Port is autonomous in its operation, i.e. the Port has an independent board of directors called a Port Commission; it must comply with regulation that protects us all. Some think that the Port is "sovereign" i.e. it operates outside the customary government regulation. Nothing could be farther from the truth and the following tally of regulations is only a sampling of the many that apply to protect our safety.

Zoning and Building Codes:

The Port complies with the Zoning and Building Codes of the City of West Sacramento. The Port's properties are zoned consistent with the General Plan of the City. The Port also complies with all the performance standards established within that zoning code. Therefore, all uses on port property must meet specific standards for noise, emissions, vibration, waste, electrical impulses, smoke, unstable materials, hazardous materials, odors, fumes, sewer discharges, safety devices, et.al.

The City issues permits and its various departments perform inspections to assure compliance with these safety standards. For instance, the Fire Department issues permits and routinely inspects the Port to assure safety from fires and materials.

The City Building Code controls all port buildings. The Port obtains permits and pays appropriate fees for new construction. The City also governs sewer releases. No new facility or construction occurs on the Port's property without the City assuring compliance with zoning and building standards.

Air Quality

The Port obtains air permits for all its facilities from the Yolo-Solano Air Quality Management District. Permits are issued and fees are paid every year to assure continuing compliance. The Air District provides continuing oversight.

Surface and Ground Water Quality

The Port obtains permits from the Central Valley Regional Water Quality Control Board, which provides continuing oversight. Water run-off from rainfall must meet specific standards prior to release into the har-

Fixing a zoning problem

From Derek Backus, President
West Sacramento Quality Urbanization and Development (WS-QUAD)

Editor's note: The WS-QUAD group is sponsoring an initiative for your November ballot in West Sacramento which seeks to change the balance of land use in the future of the city, encouraging choices other than industrial development.

I believe that the discussion over WS-QUAD's "Premier City Initiative" should be a reasoned debate of the merits of the initiative. For my part, I will endeavor to do so.

I want to explain WS-QUAD's passion, for we are passionate! We are coming together as neighbors to protect the health and welfare of our city, our homes, and our families. We want West Sacramento to fulfill its mission to become the Premier City. Being topics close to the heart, it is understandable to be passionate about these subjects.

The policy goal stated in the initiative emphasizes commercial land uses throughout the entire city, which will increase revenues to the benefit of all of West Sacramento. Instead of listening to their neighbors with an open mind (and heart), the city council made attempts to thwart the initiative by imposing procedural requirements where none exist in law. In a further attempt to prejudice the initiative, the council added biased ballot titles, labels and summaries, and continues to define the initiative as a "north versus south" issue and/or as a "port" issue.

The council's acts overturning its own planning director on a 5-0 vote in favor of bringing in a massive cement plant (exempt from the protective conditional use permit process) right next to an elementary school and residences would (to even a casual observer) suggest that the council sees an overly industrial view of our city. While it is important to retain our industrial base, we can be more than just and industrial city.

Because Kimber Goddard is strongly in favor of the Premier City Initiative and will represent us with honesty and integrity on a broad range of other important issues, WS-QUAD endorses Kimber Goddard as a candidate for city council.

Consumer Corner

HSBC Mega Hong Kong Sale

(NAPS)—Hong Kong—a tourist destination already known as a shopper's paradise—is getting even more consumer-friendly with a citywide sale, complete with special offers for visitors, sweepstakes, theme shopping and more.

Sale of the century? Hong Kong will soon host a citywide shopping bonanza.

An estimated 79 percent of visitors to this Asian metropolis spend at least part of the time shopping, and the HSBC Mega Hong Kong Sale—to be held June 15 to August 31—will likely bring that number even higher. The sale will feature four themed shopping promotions: Fashion & Beauty; Jewelry & Watches; Consumer Electronics; and Chinese Traditions.

Meanwhile, when visitors aren't shopping, they can explore a culture rich in history and traditions by taking a tour in Victoria Harbor on a traditional duk ling (Chinese junk), or by attending one of the many classes and tours that will be available, including: Pearl and Jade Appreciation; Cantonese Opera Appreciation; Fung Shui, Kung Fu and Tai Chi; and Heritage & Architecture Walks.

While some other destinations compete on price, Hong Kong is considered unbeatable in Asia for range and quality—as well as having a reputation as the region's #1 center for trendy fashions.

To learn more about the HSBC Mega Hong Kong Sale, visit the Hong Kong Tourism Board Web site at www.DiscoverHongKong.com.

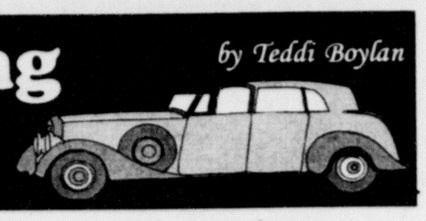
DINING, TRAVEL & ENTERTAINMENT

Touring with Teddi

by Teddi Boylan



Columnist Teddi Boylan brings you her recommendations of places to dine and places to visit in the greater West Sacramento area. Her travels include both stops at our advertisers' establishments and other institutions. Enjoy!

Well, the news is that the first meeting of the West Sacramento Restaurant and Tavern Association will be held at Westside Pub & Grill on Sunday, Aug. 18 at 1:30 p.m. All bar and restaurant owners and managers are invited to attend. Please sign in at the door to be put on future mailing lists.

I dropped into the Idle Hour on Sacramento Ave. last Sunday with my friend Maryann, and "oh boy!," the joint was jumping. They had a great crowd, with many playing in the shuffleboard tournament that began at 2 p.m. (not 6 p.m. as stated in a previous column). Don himself was a player. Everyone was having a great old time. Before I forget, you heard me tell you about Blaine Davis ("The Sundance Kid"), the musical wizard of the west, the multiple-talented D.J. who is a show all to himself. He will be appearing at the Idle Hour on Thursday evening at 8 p.m. on July 18. Drop in and let your tootsies keep the beat.

Then Maryann and I were off to the Silver Spur lounge, where Pat and Dave were hosting a great jam session.

Once again, every seat in the dining room and bar was full, and there were also many dancers on the floor. I know you will be glad to know the kitchen is now open, featuring great burgers.

In 1975, when the Rusty Duck opened on Bercut Drive in Sacramento, our crowd from Old Town couldn't wait to go and see what had been created. On first appearance, the outside staircase is really daunting. But have a heart, an elevator is cloistured among the many beams. The ascent is slow but painless as you rise past the large dining room on the second floor to the bar and café area on the third floor.

Mondays are always a good day to visit any popular restaurant, for the unfathomable reason that they are never too busy. The weather was very balmy, so I decided to dine on the small balcony off the bar area. There are only four tables on the balcony, and it didn't take long for them to fill up. I was waiting for my friend Patrick, and I'm said to say, I got the usual mediocre attention from the waiter that single little old ladies often get. If it wasn't for the bartender helping to serve, I'd probably still be sitting there waiting.

They have a special café menu that is quite reasonable, with "starters" from $4.25 to $8.95 for a shrimp cocktail (eight large shrimp). A choice of four different salads, including a great-tasting Caesar for $5.95. Or perhaps you would go for a combination of chowder and salad, chowder with a half-sandwich, or a half sandwich with salad, each for $5.95. You can even get a prime rib for $10.95.

The wine list ranges from $4.50 to $8.25 per glass, and draft beer $3.75 to $4.50. Imported beers are $3.50 to $3.75. If you like the taste of beer on a hot day, but don't want alcohol, choose from O'Doul's, Kaliber, O'Doul's Amber, for $2.50-$3.50.

It's worth it to go to the Rusty Duck with a glass of beer or wine and sit on the patio and watch the river drifting by.

The dessert list includes "mud pie" and a New York-style cheesecake.

THE RUSTY DUCK: 500 Bercut Drive, Sacramento. Monday through Friday, 11:30 a.m.; Saturday, 4:30 p.m.; Sunday brunch, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; and Sunday dinner 3 p.m.

Bercut Drive has become a great "restaurant row" with Lyons, Monterey Bay Cannery, Hungry Hunter, Rusty Duck and the new Mempis BBQ. I will tell you more about them in a future column.

PORT from p. 7 — Police log

bor. In the past year the Port constructed a $3.8 million storm treatment facility to remove impurities from rainwater.

Natural Water Quality

The U.S. Corps of Engineers and the State Department of Fish and Game are among the agencies that control construction and activities at the waterfront of natural streams, harbors and channels. The Port complies with their standards including obtaining appropriate permits. The Port also complies with Coast Guard requirements for waterway safety including provision of 6,000' feet of oil booms on site in the event of an oil spill. The Coast Guard also controls the release of ballast water to combat invasive species. The State Department of Agriculture enforces standards for disposing of the garbage from ships to control pests or pathogens.

General Public Safety

The laws of our land apply to all within the Port, and the City Police freely enter the Port to assure their application. The Port Police routinely cooperate with the City Police Department on illegal and hazardous dumping, and other serious offenses on Port property. U.S. Customs and the Immigration and Naturalization Service also assure community safety, e.g. smuggling or illegal entry.

Emergency Response

Port personnel are trained to respond to an accident that poses a threat to community safety. According to an adopted Emergency Response Plan, any number of more than a dozen agencies stand ready to eliminate the risk, whether it be a fire, spill or natural disaster.

Worker Safety

The Federal and State laws for occupational safety apply to the Port, which for instance govern safety procedures for working in high places and confined spaces.

Other agencies control the safety and maintenance of the Port's railways, its dredging activity, reclamation of soil, operation of cranes, lifts and elevators, fire extinguishers, removal of lead paints and asbestos. After all of these regulations, there are still more.

Although the Port is operationally independent, rest assured that public safety is maintained through an array of laws and regulations applied by our governments and their agencies.

CHAMPIONS from p. 6

the Winters school district and as principal of Winters high school, is a graduate of the University of Santa Clara and a former captain in the Marines. Graf currently serves on the Winters planning council and was Winters Citizen of the Year in 1996

"Skip" Davies, a former principal of Douglas Junior High School in Woodland, and an active leader in Woodland recreation circles for years was given a Yolo Champions award by Supervisor Tom Stallard who said "Skip is highly regarded and beloved in out community." Davies, participated in a number of recreation or sports-related projects over the years including creation of the Woodland High sports stadium, construction of the Woodland High swim complex, and development of the Woodland High weight room. In addition, Davies chaired Woodland's Park and Recreation Commission for a number of years.

Mary Ellen Baldwin's long tenure of service to the community of Davis was recognized by Supervisor Lois Wolk who presented her with a Yolo Champion award for "dedication to the City of Davis and to Yolo County." Wolk cited Baldwin's extensive service to Davis schools including stints on the Davis High School Site Council, and the PTAs of West Davis Elementary School, West Davis Intermediate School, and Emerson Junior High school. Baldwin was also named Davis Chamber of Commerce Member of the Year in 1991, was elected honorary Mayor Pro tem of the city, and served as executive director of the Davis Chamber of Commerce from June, 1992 to August of 1997. In addition she served on the Board of Directors of Citizens Who Care and the Board of Directors of Woodland Memorial Hospital where she is currently President.

Davis City Councilman Ted Puntillo was given a Yolo Champion award from Board Chairman Dave Rosenberg for "leadership, vision and service to the community. Ted does the heavy lifting," Rosenberg joked. Puntillo, a Vietnam veteran, has held a wide variety of service-oriented positions in the Davis community. The former Davis Postmaster, Puntillo was selected Davis Citizen of the Year in 2000, served as President of the Davis Rotary club from '97-'98, was selected Rotarian of the Year in 2000, was President of the Davis volunteer fire fighters, and was selected Volunteer Firefighter of the Year three times.

LETTERS from p. 7

Of course, this came about mainly due to the city council's streamline approval of a cement plant that would have been located too close to a school and residences. What would have been excess noise and cement dust for a school and homes was opposed by the gathering of signatures, to let the voters exercise the common sense that the city council did not. Even though cement plant management decided to build at the Port of Stockton, the issue is too important to assume no repeat will occur.

Had the cement plant been built so close to the homes and school, it would have set a dangerous precedent for future construction; i.e., zoning would have been made meaningless. Incompatible adjacent development would no longer be an argument. Just build anything you want, regardless of the effect on your new neighbors.

Of course, the cement plant built so close to the school and homes would have not only caused health problems for those living, working or going to school close by, but the value of said homes would drop drastically. Even if the cement plant picked up the tab for financial losses, what price does one put on health?

Approval of the WS-QUAD initiative should restore and maintain more common sense to the area near the Port of Sacramento and reduce traffic on Jefferson Blvd. Construction of new businesses and homes still spells more jobs for construction and other workers. Local sales tax revenues should increase. Shorter trips for shopping, saving time, fuel and pollution reduction.

Maybe the city council should consider looking for a Port of Sacramento-type business in Sacramento to develop or take over and name it the Port of West Sacramento. The board of directors would all be from Yolo County, except for one from the City of Sacramento and one from Sacramento County. Crazy? No crazier than what now exists here in West Sac. As the saying goes, "It's all about money."
